

Getting around to the FIFA World Cup 2010 venues with a rental car

South Africa is in its final preparation stage to host the first African FIFA World Cup, an event that the whole nation and indeed the whole world are looking forward to. If you are one of the fortunate individuals who will be attending this event in South Africa, you should also be preparing for your trip and book your rental car today. With a rental car you will have enough flexibility and independence to explore this African beauty and simply drive to all the FIFA World Cup venues.

As the world is counting down the days to the FIFA World Cup in South Africa, supporters are waiting in anticipation for the announcement of their team's final selections and are bidding for last minute tickets to their favourite team's games. If you are travelling to South Africa as a supporter or tagging along with a spouse or friend, make sure you get to know the real South Africa, go off-the-beaten track and truly experience this Rainbow Nation. The easiest way to travel through South Africa is to hire a car as the roads are in great condition and the distances between cities are short. As the country will be flocked with supporters from all over the world, the demand for flights, rental cars and other means of transport will be extremely high. If you wait until the last minute you might just find yourself stuck with little or very expensive travel options. Simply hire a rental car today with carhiremarket.com to avoid such a dilemma.

Those who want to optimise their time in-between games are the best off with their own rental car, as South Africa has so much to offer and to discover. South Africa is not only known for its unique national parks, incredible nature and phenomenal wild life, but also for its charming wine regions and beautiful colonial-style towns. You need to take advantage of your time whilst visiting South Africa. Cape Town, for example, is plentiful with "must see" attractions and having the flexibility to travel in your own time around town with a rental car will make it all the more memorable. Whether its wining and dining at the famous Waterfront, taking a picture at the southern most point in Africa, having sundowners on top of Table Mountain or walking through the cell on Robben Island where Nelson Mandela was imprisoned for 27 years, this city will leave you speechless and filled with a sense of joy and satisfaction, save in the knowledge you have visited one of Planet Earth's special places.

Other World Cup venues such as Johannesburg, Durban and Nelspruit are also worth a visit and each city has its own unique energy and charm all waiting for you to explore. So go out and enjoy what it has to offer!

South Africa – its people and places - are ready for the action; make sure you are too! Don't be caught "offsides", book your rental car today with carhiremarket.com where you will find the most -favourable rental car rates and be certain of scoring a goal of your own!
