

"Why can I not find a carhiremarket.com car rental station at the airport? I'm sure I booked my car through their website..."

Yes that's right – you did book through us. However, carhiremarket.com is simply a price comparison website; we are not a car rental broker or supplier.

I am a price comparison website. I only compare car rental prices from various brokers and suppliers. I am completely transparent and you know who you book with through me. I am not a broker or a supplier and do not own any rental cars; I simply connect you to the broker or supplier with the best price.

So what is the difference between a broker and a supplier?

I also do not have my own cars that you can rent and you will not find me at the airport. However, I secure rental cars in bulk from car hire suppliers (such as Hertz, Avis and Alamo) and offer them to you with additional extras included. If you book a rental car through me, you will not know who your car rental supplier will be until you have booked - therefore please look for the supplier on your voucher. Brokers that you might know are Holiday Autos, Cardelmar and Sunnycars.

Broker

I am the one who owns the cars that you rent. You probably know me very well and if you think of car rental companies, my name usually comes to mind. I often advertise my rental cars on websites such as carhiremarket.com and through brokers such as Holiday Autos and Cardelmar. Suppliers that you might know are Hertz, Avis, National, Alamo and SIXT.

Supplier

All in all, if you book a rental car on carhiremarket.com, you will save time and money. We make your life easier by comparing all the lowest offers available from both brokers and suppliers – thus you only need to look in one place! Please remember though that your rental agreement is between yourself and the broker or supplier, and that carhiremarket.com only facilitates the transaction.
